THE HOUSE OF LOVE.

The First Trains on the Richmond and Alleghany Entirond.

The long and anxiously-looked-for event has come at last. The Richmond and Alle-ghany railroad has been completed as far as Maiden's-Adventure dam, twenty-eight miles west from Richmond, and an engine and cars have been put upon the track at this end of the line.

As has been already stated, the new company purchased two engines from the Richmond, Fredericksburg and Potomac Railroad Company (the locomotive-works of the country being unable to furnish any until December, having so many orders ahead), and yesterday No. 1, having been thoroughly overhauled, painted, and lettered, was put upon the track.

At half-past 9 o'clock yesterday morning after the departure of the northward-bound train, the locomotive was brought from the Fredericksburg shops down to the Byrd-Street depôt, where it was switched upon the Tredegar track, and then went up to the Richmond and Alleghany switch, just in-General R. Lindsay Walker, who has been appointed road-master, got ready for a short trial-trip up the line, and at 10:10 A. M. he started off.

The conductor of the train was Captain A. C. Wilkinson; engineer, Mr. W. T. Bryant; fireman, W. T. Lieb—all late emples of the Picture of the ployes of the Richmond and Danville Rail-road Company. Major C. M. Bolton, division engineer in charge of construction be-tween Richmond and Lynchburg; Mr. George F. Thomasson, the veteran tracklayer; a Dispatch man, and several other persons, were the favored ones. The bell sounded, the throttle was opened, and the first engine bought for the Richmond and Alleghany railroad made its first trip up a portion of the beautiful valley of James river. It seemed odd indeed to be perched up in the engineer's cab of a locomotive on a sure-enough rathroad, and not on the deck of a boat in the canal, drawn by horses. Yet it was true. Hundreds of people gathered at the switch to see the start, and many followed on up the line. The cow-catcher was full, the tender was crowded. and we believe one venturesome lad dared to ride the boller. Of this we are not sure, however. But we were off. The whistle sounded-a deep-toned whistie that will soon resound through the valley, and stir up the good people who have long desired the building of this great road. The engine went along at a fair rate of speed around the curves and across the trestles as smoothly and nicely as though the road had been in use for months. The trip was a success; and having accomplished his object, General Walker returned to the city about 11 o'clock. At 5 o'clock last evening General Walker, Superintendent Williams, of the canal; Assistant Superintendent Cosby, and several tion as far as the Three-Mile locks and back in about twenty-five minutes. The track was found to be in as good condition as could be expected in view of the fact that it has

On and after Saturday evening, September 4th, navigation will be closed on the canal between Richmond and Maiden's-Adveuture dam. Within fourteen days thereafter the Richmond and Alleghany Railroad Company will run trains from Rich-mond to Maiden's-Adventure dam, connecting at that point with freight- and packetboats, and affording all necessary facilities for the safe and quick transfer of freight and passengers to and from Richmond. The connection will be made, if possible, in less time than above named, in order that boatmen and the public generally may be

DEATH OF MRS. MARY M. ROSENE.—The sad announcement of the death of this estimable lady appears in the obituary column of the Dispatch. Mrs. Rosene was the eldest daughter of the late William A. The deceased was one of the first graduates of the normal school conducted by Mr. Andrew Washburne, and when the them from breaking down the haies, or hedges. A DANGEROUS PLACE,-The extension of the west end of Marshall street, in front of West-End Park, has necessitated the cutting down of the street in some places eight or ten feet, leaving a very high embankment on either side, and making it dangerous to persons walking along that street after dark. Friday night several persons en route for the circus fell over this man-trap and were badly injured. Mayor Carrington having been notified of the dangerous condition of the place, had a police man stationed there to warn people of the danger. Additional lights were also placed in position. Saturday night the place was well guarded, and no accidents were reported.

One of the sonnets which Spenser has prefixed to his "Fairie Queen" is inscribed "To the Right Noble and Valorous Knight, Sir Walter Raleigh, Lord Warden of the Stannaries, and Lieuteant of Cornwall." Here we have a bint of the origin of our surname Slanard. The "stannaries" were the tin-mines (Latin stannum, "tin") of Cornwall and other parts of Britain. In those early times when the merchants of Tyre and Sidon led the commerce of the We have only to suppose that the Celtic inhabitants of Cornwall retained after the de-parture of their masters the name which that afterwards, during the period of the Saxon heptarchy, the officer whose business
